In our great country evolution has gradually warped the minds and thinking of many people. It has destroyed truth and devalued life. American Grandparents who were aghast to learn that Hitler’s Germany performed abortions now live in a country where more than 54 million abortions have been performed since abortion was legalized in 1973 – just 28 years after World War II ended. American children in public schools are not allowed to learn of all the sound arguments for creation. Nor are they allowed to hear or speak about our great, all-knowing Creator.

Our citizens cry out for laws that would stop bullying and cruelty, thievery, lying and dishonesty. They scream for laws to stop the random killing of children and adults who are living their everyday lives, working, studying or caring for others. Yet those of evolutionary persuasion won’t have God’s laws of love and kindness taught in our schools: do not kill or injure others but help them and be kind; do not abuse, forsake or be unfaithful to your spouse; do not steal from others but help them maintain their goods and possessions; do not tell lies about your neighbor and always put the best construction on situations; do not covet things that belong to others; be thankful for what you have and always do your best; share your abundance; stop complaining. Would it be so terrible for our children and young people to learn these things and act accordingly?

How deceived we have been by those who would replace God with social Darwinism. Can we not learn from history? For more than 150 years wicked men have insisted that the people under their control must follow their godless ideas and so have corrupted the nations of the world to this day. Thomas Huxley clung to this evil teaching, as did Karl Marx, Benito Mussolini, Jospeh Stalin and Adolph Hitler. The biologists in their countries were forced to follow Communist positions of belief which had no regard for moral and aesthetic quality. Instead, as Hitler emphasized, there must be a struggle for survival and actually replace God’s rule with man’s “brilliant” mind. Hitler felt it was his duty to create a super race which would become “Masters of the Universe.” How many of the so-called “inferior races” would have to be destroyed?

Hitler’s “selective breeding” programs to improve the race were not to be contaminated with bad blood or inferior gene pools. Millions were destroyed by his outrageous demands based on hideous beliefs. He condemned Christians for opposing evolution. Stalin destroyed millions of Christians for not yielding to Marxism. People are not important in nations that favor Darwin’s evolution. They are simply used for experimental purposes. In no way has evolution helped mankind or the world we live in.

Evolution Supports Social Darwinism

commentary by Doris Sattler
Darwin’s theory of “natural selection” led to his creating a Tree of Life with the claim that every living being developed from one common ancestor. Just as Charles Darwin built his towering but imaginary Tree of Life, so evolutionists today have built a kind of ‘Tower of Babble’ from which they rule. Natural selection is said to be the mechanism that created everything from nothing. All living beings are presented by Darwin on his Tree of Life without a hint of how the universe came into being.

What connection does this have with the intelligent design debate and the creation-evolution conflict?

First, there is a cultural and political comparison with the Tower of Babel in scripture. The Tower of Babel was vertical in an attempt by people using their natural powers to make contact with the divine. The 21st-century Tower of Babble is a horizontal structure in which evolutionists deny the supernatural, while placing natural selection and nature as the super system with an undescribed energy and power from which everything originated. We are told by babbling theorists that natural selection somehow built a Tree of Life, even though this would obviously have required supernatural energy. Darwin claimed that by probable effects all living beings developed from this Tree.

This chapter exposes the evolutionary cultural and political virus that flows out of this Tower of Babble, not only through science enterprises, but also through the schools, media, government, religious institutions, music, and art, including many corporations that are involved in science. The appearance of the evolutionary virus 150 years ago found a perfect partner with the ever present liberal and leftist thinkers and doers who have invaded cultures since the beginning of time. These political activists were eager and happy to join forces and merge into Darwinian culture, being grafted into the evolutionary Tree of Life, especially as the common enemy of the Judeo-Christianity.

The Tower of Babble built by the leftist evolutionary culture is a seven-story structure under which the evolutionary virus with its natural selection Tree of Life stands as the central plaza. From this building the evolutionary virus extends into science classrooms and laboratories, school buildings, media enterprises, government institutions, churches, and entertainment auditoriums of all sorts.

The scriptural Tower of Babel was built to reach heaven but the people were prevented by God from doing so by a confusion of tongues (or languages). It was an attempt to enlarge themselves as human beings into one super people and culture, while in a real sense diminishing the divine.

Today’s ideological Tower of Babble was created and is managed by evolutionary scientists with their philosophy and religion. This natural selection Tower includes telescopes for each of the seven institutional levels not only to see all that natural selection offers, but also to watch over and control all the institutions of our culture.

The evolutionary religion in the Tower of Babble is all horizontal with its ideological naturalism and humanism that denies a Divine Being and the supernatural to the extent that all that it offers is tunnel vision that sees through philosophical and religious microscopes and telescopes. Looking horizontally, they see only the human landscape, the backstreets and dark alleys.
of human existence, while being incapable of viewing the metaphorical mountains and skies that “declare the glory of God.”

In this naturalistic, horizontal view, we will see in all seven of the cultural levels that everything is relative – based on situational science that results in situational ethics, situational morals, and a situational culture that developed from situational knowledge and academia. All of this results from suspended logic and unreasonable judgments that deny and ignore historic truth. We have seen and will see that scientific situational ethics and suspended logic is sometimes so crude and uncivil that it should be regarded as intellectual barbarism. In the natural world, we often see disorder, chaos, lawlessness and nihilistic activities that suggest anarchy. Some of this can now be seen in our national institutions, culture, and even in government.

UNETHICAL TACTICS AND METHODS

The ideological Tower is a place where babbling and unethical behavior appears to be based on Saul Alinsky’s book, Rules for Radicals. Christians have experienced and now face such unethical treatment in order to manipulate, then intimidate, then dominate, and ultimately to annihilate them from the public square. The aim is to submerge Christianity as a voice secondary to evolution, and put Christianity on the defensive.

The evolutionary establishment invites unsuspecting and uninformed people into their Tower of Babble to instruct them in naturalistic science, and ultimately catechize them in order to gain mind control.

The Prologue of Alinsky’s book tells us that: “The EVOLUTIONARY FORCE today has two targets, moral as well as material… Urge violence and pride… ‘burn the system down.’” The Purpose of the book begins with a quote from Job 7:1, “The life of man upon earth is a warfare…” Alinsky writes that the perennial question is, “Does the end justify the means?” When he writes about “A Word about Words,” it appears that his favorite words are “politics, power, self-interest, compromise, and conflict.” Regarding “the education of an organizer,” he writes, “The building of many mass power organizations to merge into a national popular power force cannot come without many organizations.” He states that an organizer can lack various qualities, but the one that he must have is “communication.”

Regarding tactics, Alinsky says, “tactics mean doing what you can with what you have.” He refers to Gideon – when he writes about concealing members in the dark and about making a great noise to make others believe that your organization numbers many more than it does. “If your organization is too tiny even for noise, stink up the place.” The way to organize your action, he says, is to focus on the middle class and the low-income parts of the population and to involve labor unions and political parties. He states that, “The pragmatics of power will not allow any alternative.”

THE FOUNDATION OF THE TOWER OF BABBLE

It is clear that Darwin gave no thought to whether he was building a theory of origins on the solid rock of truth and observational science or on the shifting sands of assumptions and imagination. And there is no doubt that Darwin’s evolutionary supporters accepted a tower of scientism built on the shifting sands of conjecture and imprecise hypotheses where no rational discussion or questions are allowed.

We have seen and will see that scientific situational ethics and suspended logic is sometimes so crude and uncivil that it should be regarded as intellectual barbarism.
Every builder knows that the foundation of a building must be solid, concrete, and level. The shocking fact is that the evolutionary Tower of Babble was built on a sand foundation of assumptions, not on the rock foundation of scientific truth. Jesus showed the reality of a firm and solid foundation when he stated, “Everyone who hears what I say and obeys it will be like a wise person who built a house on rock. Rain poured, and floods came. Winds blew and beat against that house. But it did not collapse, because its foundation was on rock. Everyone who hears what I say but doesn’t obey it will be like a foolish person who built a house on sand. Rain poured, and floods came. Winds blew and struck the house. It collapsed, and the result was a total disaster.” [Matthew 7:24-27]

Paul, in telling us that Jesus Christ is the foundation of the Christian church wrote, “People may build on this foundation with gold, silver, precious stones, wood, hay, or straw. The day will make what each one does clearly visible because fire will reveal it. That fire will determine what kind of work each person has done. If what a person has built survives, he will receive a reward. If his work is burned up, he will suffer the loss.” [1 Corinthians 3:12-15]

We will see whether the foundations of the Christian Church and the evolutionary Tower of Babble are built on rock or sand, and whether the structures contains stone or paper.

THE 7 LEVELS OF THE TOWER OF BABBLE

The evolutionary virus flows from the tower, poisoning our culture through: 1|Science (both classrooms and laboratories), 2|Academia, 3|Media, 4|Government, 5|Religion, 6|Music and 7|Art. The virus exerts a costly toll on the lives of citizens in which political correctness demands mimicking, aping and parroting of evolutionary “assumptions.” Payments are required that box people into a 21st-century form of slavery in which they must agree to cooperate, agree to and “live with it,” and only then will they graduate and get a university professorship or a good government job.

As we look at the science ruling class and its ideological Tower of Babble, we must resolve to respond with respectful and open discussions. There should be no bullhorns, shouting matches, or bullying as demonstrated by people from leftist and liberal groups. Our intent ought not be to cause unrest or upset, but to ask questions about the true historical context. The only historical record about origins is available in the scriptures, which are not a scientific report but a religion accepted by faith, as evolution is accepted by faith.

Darwin’s Tree of Life stands propped up in the grand entrance of the Tower of Babble. But the tree is dead and there are no living shrubs or plants anywhere, only plastic versions of them. Everything inside appears in good order because dwellers and workers have checked their intelligence at the door to obtain credentials from the ruling class. Ideology and blind faith replace reason, and knee-jerk reactions replace wise counsel and thoughtful decision making in this inflexible environment.

Darwinian evolutionary naturalism denies the supernatural, leading to humanism and relativism. As we view macro-evolution with its connections and relationships, first focusing on the individual components or “trees,” then stepping back to view the wider picture or “forest,” its destructive influence on individuals and on moral, civil and religious society becomes painfully and evermore clear.
Every seed is a miniature miracle. God has programmed the tiny sequoia seed to become the largest tree on earth – reaching nearly 300 feet tall and weighing many tons. God has designed the humble apple seed to yield a bounty of delicious fruit for years to come. And God has planned a multitude of seeds to produce spectacular blossoms in abundance!

Consider the many varieties of seeds. As stated in Genesis, each seed always produces after its own kind. And just as the Lord intended, the fruits and byproducts that they bear have supplied the needed food and resources for man and his environment.

In the first chapter of Genesis, God said, Let the earth bring forth grass, the herb that yields seed, and the fruit that yields fruit according to its kind, whose seed is in itself on the earth. And it was so.

So the Creator made life with the ability to reproduce after its kind. Plants produce seed. This answers the question, which came first, the seed or the plant? Clearly, God created plant life with the seed in itself.

Seeds are masterpieces of micro miniaturization. Inside each seed is a little baby, a little embryonic plant! It’s already got leaves, a stem, and a root, surrounded by a seed coat that protects it, and filled with all kinds of receptors monitoring environmental signals so it knows the temperature, moisture conditions, how much oxygen. All these things have to be present before it will sprout.

The first seeds we find as fossils look just like the seeds we have today. The seed is the first reproductive structure God made on Creation Day 3. And it’s the way living things, ever since, have multiplied after their kind.

Today scientists have discovered what Scripture stated all along: inside the unassuming seed is life itself. Contained within are living cells – tiny factories of amazing complexity. No scientist has been able to build a synthetic seed, and no seed is simple.

Seeds are programmed to remain dormant until water and warmth are available. Who installed this ability to monitor temperature and humidity? Who determined the proper time for the seed to germinate? Who told the root: “You must go down!” and the stem: “You must head upward!”? Do you see the guiding hand of our all-loving Creator?

In order to sprout and thrive, seeds require the proper soil nutrients, the ideal properties found in water, the correct frequency spectrum of light, the right atmosphere, and the necessary pollinators. All of these must have been in place from the beginning in order for seeds to yield a harvest of blessings for mankind!

What a drab world it would be without flowering plants. From unassuming seed to magnificent blossom, flowers reflect a sliver of God’s splendor. There are a great variety of flowering plants flourishing all over the globe – each with its own unique flower, fruit and fragrance.

As a blossom expands, its fragrance fills the air. Consider that each flower always produces its own particular perfume. Even more amazing, God uses the same three elements – soil, light, and water – to produce all these brilliant varieties.

Remarkably, certain flowers are designed to know what time it is. California poppies, morning glories, and day lilies are three beautiful examples. Opening and closing with clock-like precision, they are sensitive to atmospheric pressure, length of daylight, temperature, and humidity and must therefore have built-in biorhythms.

Today scientists have discovered what Scripture stated all along: inside the unassuming seed is life itself. Contained within are living cells – tiny factories of amazing complexity. No scientist has been able to build a synthetic seed, and no seed is simple.
Each leaf of a plant is also a marvel. Long before man discovered how to harness solar power, the Creator installed miniature solar panels in every green leaf. As the leaf expands, it is programmed to face the sun to receive its energy. This energy powers its chemical factories. As a result, carbon dioxide is absorbed; oxygen is released; and hydrogen is used in making sugars. How ingenious of our God to design leaves to absorb man’s waste gas and release the oxygen which every creature needs for survival.

Photosynthesis is also the basis for all our food supply. Thankfully, countless numbers of God’s little green machines perform this service every day.

Flowering plants are such a testimony to God’s provision. Not only are they critical in terms of providing food and medicine and various other aspects of life as we know it, but we would simply not be able to exist without the flowering plants.

Well, that ties in with the large group of animals called the arthropods. One of the groups of arthropods are the insects. Insects need the plants, and plants, most assuredly, need the insects for pollination, in order to keep the plants fertilized on a year to year basis.

Genesis 2:9 tells us that God created the green plants, pleasant to the sight and good for food.

Plants use the amazing process of photosynthesis to trap energy from the sun, to put together carbon dioxide molecules from the air, water molecules from the soil, to make sugar molecules—the basic building block for all of the other food groups.

Where do plants get the carbon dioxide? We breathe it out. Animals breathe out carbon dioxide and plants absorb that carbon dioxide. They absorb the water. They release oxygen from the water molecules so we can breathe it in, and we burn the sugar to produce the carbon dioxide that plants can absorb to make more sugar.

You may get the idea all these parts have to fit together at the same time.

That’s the thing, as we look at the Creation account and how God made plants, animals, people—all the physical features of the universe—to fit together in an intricate pattern, reflecting His glory.

Food, oxygen, medicine, fuel, raw materials... Surely the Lord designed plants for our benefit. The rich diversity of flowering plants and the many purposes they serve, all point to a wise and compassionate Creator.

Though magnificent in bloom, the glory of the flower quickly fades. Scripture likens man’s life on earth to a flower—so quick to pass away. Therefore, how important it is for each of us to seek everlasting life today.
